

High Point University A Path to the Future

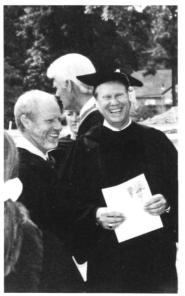

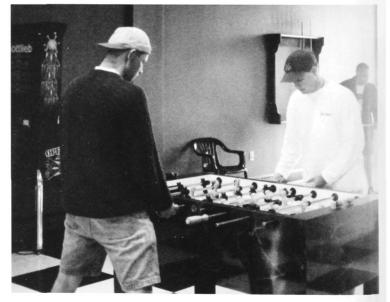

The 1995 edition of the Zenith recognizes High Point University as one of the many paths its students will take towards the future. The graduating class of 1994 represents the end of that journey. It is only fitting that they should begin their adventure into the future in front of Roberts Hall with the lamp of knowledge to light their way. Although all graduates put in their time to get a degree at the same university, the journey for each one was different. Some took less than four years, some took more. Some chose the beaten path while others made their own way. Graduation was just the formal end of one journey and the beginning of another. In the words of Robert Frost, there are "many miles to go before I sleep." Godspeed!

A Path to the Future

For most of our lives we've followed the path laid before us. Someone else made the decisions for the first 15-18 years. Suddenly it's time to make one of the first major decisions of our lives, and we choose to become a part of High Point University and its community. Life, from now own, becomes a myriad of choices and decisions, and each day is one filled with challenges. But we are not alone in our endeavor. We join each other at this University for a short time as we travel this path together.

JACOB CHRISTIAN MARTINSON

Making his mark in ten years of service

Jacob Christian Martinson, Jr., was born on a farm in rural Wisconsin. When he entered the first grade, it was in a one room school house. There were 19 pupils in grades 1-8. Today, a picture of all 19 hangs in his office. Right in the middle of the bunch is "Young Jake," the smallest of them all. On the farm, he learned the meaning of hard work. So when the family moved from the farm to a small town, Jake immediately found a job, first as a newspaper delivery boy and then as a delivery boy for Western Union. As he tells it, he greatly respected his boss at Western Union, and she respected him. In a 1950's memorandum to the company headquarters, she had this to say about Jake: "You can give this young man a job to do and forget it. It will not only be done well, but usually it will be done better than you would have done it yourself. Moreover, Jake is not afraid of hard work." In fact, her evaluation was such that Western Union's central office in Minneapolis sent him a telegram offering him full-time employment and an education. Of course, he turned them down. Reflecting back on the experience, Dr. Martinson commented: "Even if I had become president of Western Unoin, it would not have challenged me."

After graduating from Huntingdon College (B.A.) and Duke University (M.Div.) and after serving as minister of one of the largest churches in Florida, Jacob C. Martinson elected to return to school to earn a dotorate. He chose Vanderbilt. The day he received his degree, he became a college president. In the course of his 23-year tenure at three different institutions of higher education, Dr. Martinson has demonstrated vision, imagination, and insight. In fact, because of his scholarship and because of his dedicated service to higher education, Dr. Martinson has recently been awarded an honorary doctorate by Huntingdon College; and, more recently, he has been named an honorary fellow of Westminster College Oxford.

Ten years have passed since Dr. Martinson assumed the presidency of High Point. When he arrived (1985), High Point was a small college enrolling some 1200 students. In 1995, it is a University enrolling some 2500 students. In the intervening years, the University has built the Madison Park campus in Winston-Salem, North Carolina; and the endowment has grown from $7 million to more than $27 million. The University has spent $5 million on campus renovation, including a $2 million restoration of historic Roberts Hall; and it has spent $14 million on new construction, including $6.75 million for the Millis Athletic/Convocation Center and $3 million for Finch Hall. Academically, there have been remarkable accomplishments as well. Most significantly, the University initiated graduate programs in management and international management; the teacher education program has been accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE); and the sports medicine program at High Point University became the first sports medicine program in the nation to be accredited by the American Medical Association (1994).

In 1989, Dr. Martinson established the National Commision on the Future of High Point [University]. The Commision, which completed its work a year later, had a single mission—to recommend strategic directions for High Point's future. Clearly, the work of the Commission was not futile labor. It created the energy which this institution needs to become one of the premier small universities in the nation. On September 13, 1994, the trustees announced The Founders Campaign for High Point University—a campaign designed to raise more than $40 million dollars in order to make this dream a reality. Dr. Martinson has made his mark.

GETTING STARTED

Orientation focuses on getting students involved

Orientation proved to be a landmark success with a revised, more extensive format. This two week program covered every facet of being a part of the High Point University community. Students were given a manual covering events and assigned mentor groups which helped guide them through orientation. Each night culminated in a social event which boasted huge attendance by freshmen and the general student population. Derby Day marked the offiial end of orientation as all students were invited to participate. Such an ambitious orientation program sets a high standard for years to come.

HOMECOMING '94

Enjoying a music from throughout the years

The student, faculty, and alumni had a blast from the past at Chaplin's Jig, Homecoming 1994. For many, Homecoming was more than a dance: it was it was also part of their reunion weekend. The dance was held at Market Square in High Point. There was a different twist to the musical entertainment. A live orchestra played music as far back as the 20's. There was also a DJ who played music from the 70's through the 90's. At the dance an old movie projecter showed Chaplin's movies. Entertainment certainly has come a long way since Chaplin's day in the spotlight.

Market Square is just as good for dances as it is for the Furniture Market.

DERBY DAY

A New Tradition

Derby Day, a new event for the fall orientation of 1994, brought together the entire student body to compete in games and athletic activities. It was held on the Intramural field Saturday, August 27,1994, from 12:00-5:00 p.m. Colorcoded shirts were used to distinguish the different groups on campus in all the activities. Derby Day will now become a regular part of the orientation in the fall. This orientation activity was sponsored by Student Government, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council, and several faculty members.

Study Abroad and International Day teach awareness

Imagine spending an entire semester of your college experience studying in another country. Fourteen students from High Point, Amanda Cook, Danielle Gibeck, Jamie Goldenbaum, Stephanie Hedrick, Heather Huff, Diana Kennedy, Catherine Kirchhofer, Heather Krimm, Melissa Maudsley, Kristy Scott, and Greg Thompson did just that. These students spent their fall semester studying in Oxford, England. For those students who couldn't travel, on October 4, 1994,International Day brought the world to them as students celebrated their world community.

WHAT'S GOING ON?

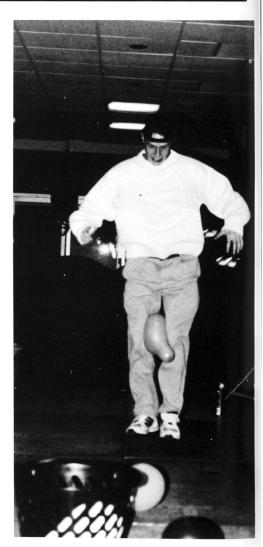

The most-asked question on campus

By taking a look at the Activities Office calendar, any student would notice that there was a lot going on at High Point University. Game shows and comedians proved to be the big crowd draw while coffee house singers pleased smaller audiences. Movie nights were a hit, along with numerous special dinners in the cafeteria (courtesy of ARAMark). The Alpha Experience Virtual Reality Simulator packed them in during Family Weekend with over 450 participants. The Indigo Club was spotlighted with tournament nights and special events. The High Point University Tower Players were on the prowl. This year's featured presentation was Annie. The cast, directed by Ron Law, held three performances on November 3-5. Audiences enjoyed the emotion-filled story executed by the Tower Players. Steve Steffek exclaimed, "It's the best show I've seen since I've been here because Ron Law did a great job on the music and choreography." The compliment was well-deserved considering record-breaking audiences witnessed 28 actors make 10 different scene changes using various props, a live band, and a great stage dog.

WE GIVE OF OURSELVES

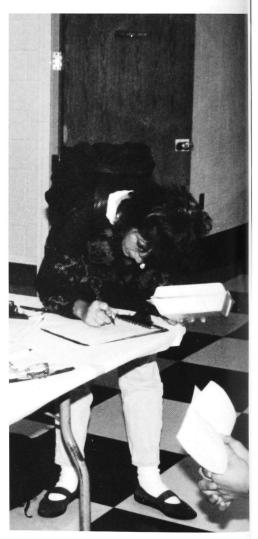

Volunteerism brings out the best in all of us

Volunteer activities have always been an important part of campus life. This year has been no exception, with a steady increase of individuals and organizations taking an active role in helping others within the High Point community. There were several blood drives to benefit the American Red Cross. Residence Hall Councils and Resident Assistants collected food and clothing for charities and the Open Door Shelter. The Campus Connection Volunteer Center helped place volunteers with local agencies, while organizing and recording the numerous hours compiled in volunteer service by students.

On Sunday, November 6, 1994 High Point University hosted the United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants. The arena of the Millis Center was packed tight with students, families, and members of the community all anticipating an emotional show. The Singing Sergeants, formed in 1945, and is the oldest professional chorus in the U.S. military. They preformed a mumber of musical selection paying tribute to the U.S. Armed Air Force in World War II. Dr Wray said, "The United Air Force Band and Singing Sergents the brought community to High Point University. More than 2,000 people attended this event-making it the largest cultural event ever produced on our campus."

GOING OUT

What High Point students do for fun

Twenty years from now, students won't remember what grades they made in their hardest class, or even what that class was. What they will remember will be the goods times they had with friends in the off-hours of their college careers. High Point students found new and interesting (or old and comfortable) way to enjoy that free time. Local restaurants such as Alex's and Ham's boasted almost cultlike devotion from their University patrons. Other favorite past-times included various clubs, theatres, and malls in the Triad. By far, the number one activity was spending time with friends doing anything.

TRICK AND TREATS

High Point students enjoy fall and winter holidays

Whether "Trick or Treat" or "Ho, ho, ho, Merry Christmas!," the High Point students found various ways to enjoy themselves during the fall and winter holidays. For Halloween the main events were pumpkin carving contests and the pumpkin pie eating contest. As the semester rolled on and Christmas shopping days grew fewer and fewer, the annual "Lighting of the Tree" took place in front of the Smith Library. Many students came out to herald the beginning of the Christmas season with traditional Christmas songs.

EVENING DEGREE PROGRAM

The Evening Degree Program (EDP), started about 17 years ago, was formed to allow those who work full-time jobs to also get their degrees in four years. Now the two campuses of the High Point University EDP program, located in High Point and Winston-Salem, enroll over 1,000 students.

Through EDP, students are able to major in Accounting,
Business Administration and Economics, Computer Information Systems, Elementary Education, Industrial and Organization Psychology, and Psychology. Courses are offered three nights a week in an eight-week session. Unlike traditional day students, EDP students have full-time jobs while they get their degrees.

Faculty and students partake of the holiday goodies.

Waiting for class to begin gives students afew minutes to chat.

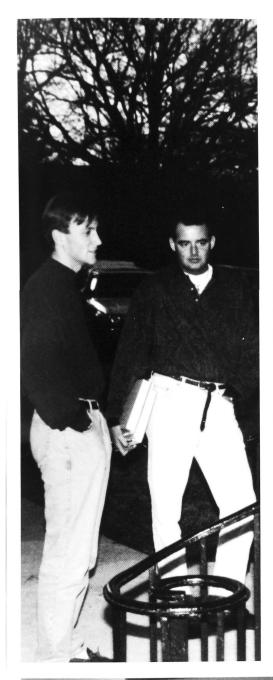

The work day may be over, but the school day has just begunfor this EDP students.

Students use those extra few minutes to get their minds of the class ahead.

Students register for classes after a full day on the job.

A plus to evening classes is the low student-teacher ratio.

North Hall is home to several offices, classrooms, and the most important, the break area.

As sun sets, the evening degree students arrive and the campus comes to life.

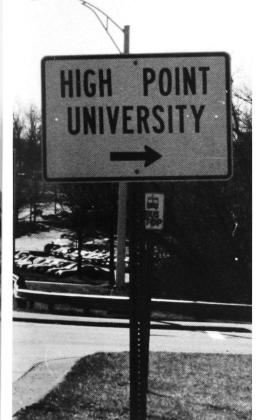

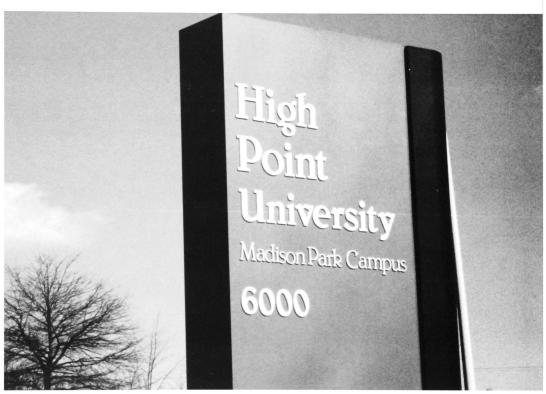

Catherine King mans the campus's main office.

Madison Park

High Point University is not confined to one place or one campus. In fact, the University reaches as far as Winston-Salem with the Madison Park Campus. This satellite site serves as additional classroom and office space in order to better serve our evening degree students. For many students, the Madison Park Campus provides an accessible alternative to furthering their education at High Point University.

South Hall is located down the hill from North and is comprised mainly of classrooms.

GREEK WEEK

Every year the Greeks on campus battle it out to see just who is the best. Each fraternity is paired up with a sorority to compete together against the other teams. Each day of the week contains events such as dizzy bat, lip-sync contest, volley ball, belly flop contest, banner making, and more. How well each team does in each event will determine the Greek Week champs for that year. For 1994, Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and Zeta Tau Alpha sorority were the champions of Greek Week. As a team, they excelled in every event. Greek Week is a fun-filled week that is just as fun to watch as it is to participate.

Colophon for 1995 Zenith

The craftline cover was an embossed forest mission grain with copper foil flakes over a mottled die cut of Roberts Hall. Body copy was 10 point Palatino with the exception of the seniors, which was done in Park Avenue, and the sports section, which was done in Avant Garde. Headlines varied in size and type style. Mugshots were taken by Ray Ware of Lifetouch Studious, and other candids were submitted by David Estes, Mike Gelardi, Katherine Hill, and various staff members.

Barbara Ann Werkheiser

Barbara Ann Werkheiser came to High Point University in the fall of 1992. She quickly made many friends. Her caring and loving spirit touched the lives of many people. She was a unique individual who brought many good qualities to the sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha. She tought us a little about life and how to be ourselves. Her spirit will live in our hearts forever.

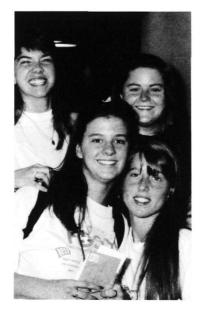

"Our memories of today will last a lifetime. We'll take the best, and forget the rest, and someday we'll find these are the best of times." "We gave of that which you had to give, we learned to laugh, we learned to live, in all, my life whatever it may be, I'll never forget what you gave to me." Andrea McCoy

We will stand by you in life. We will mourn for you in death. We will love you for eternity.

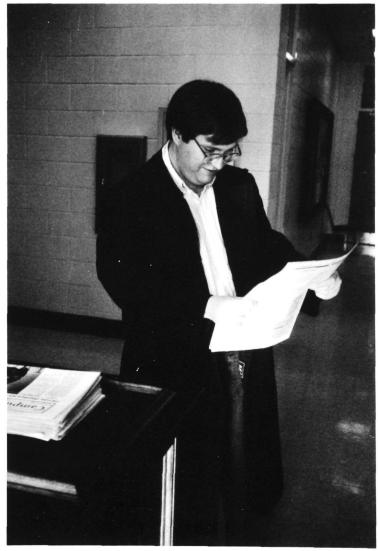

A Path to the Future

All good things must come to an end, and so we close this chapter of the 1994-1995 academic year. Seniors will leave and enter the work world, travel, or perhaps pursue further study. Underclassmen will pack their belongings and think ahead to the summer and school year ahead. But for all, the memories of High Point University will remain as we journey down a path to the future.

High Point University A Path to the Future

As all paths begin, they too must end. The 1994-1995 academic year has come to an end. The graduating senoirs path will go beyond the confines of our campus. But as they journey into their respective futures, High Point will remain a pleasant memory of their past. Hopefully, each person will make the choice to support and affirm High Point University and return to their alma mater where our paths will meet once more. It has been the pleasure of the 1995 Zenith staff to prepare this record of High Point University and document a small part of our important history.
